which was no less than an entry by Deputy Sheriff Silverthorne into the "castle" of A. . King, the great street pawnbroker, with an exscution for $1,000. King is well known to the citizens of New Orleans as well as those of San-Francisco. He was at one time a merchant in the former city, where he falled some years ago, and then came to California with the net proceeds of the operation, which are said to be very large. He arrived in this city some five or six years ago, and went into the atreet brokerage husiness, buying stocks and lending money on watches, lowelry and other safe collaterals. He appears to have worn but one suit of clothes from the day of his arrival here until the present, and was never known to indulge in expense, except on one or two occassions. He once bantered John Cook, late Assessor, to throw coin into the bay, and for won the het.
